MY PERSPECTIVES STORY: CHUCK RAPP

I first heard about Perspectives at least two decades ago but never got around to signing up until 2010. Why did I wait so long?!

At that point, I was at a career crossroads; I had been informed in July that my job would not exist after mid-October. What to do next? Perspectives turned out to be perfect timing for me as we considered the next phase of our lives. I learned so much that fall about God’s global mission and ways to be engaged in it.

There is a misperception that Perspectives is only for those interested in missions, but it's much more; it's about God's mission and His purpose for all of us.

The following year I was asked to share a facilitator role in another Perspectives class. During lesson 10, Perspectives suddenly became very personal as our instructor Dr. Len Bartlotti (a consistent favorite who is returning for this fall’s classes) shared a story from his speaking engagement in a church missions convention. He recounted, “I’m not here to ask for your money; I’m here to ask for your children for missions.”

That single sentence simultaneously resonated with me and scared me greatly as our daughter and son-in-law were just beginning to consider missions. Fast forward five years later and they – and our three grandchildren – will soon be leaving for their second term working with an unreached group of people.

Perspectives not only helped me better understand God’s mission for my life, but it also helped us to prepare to release our family members to God’s call to missions.
